

THE TRIANGLE TRADE IN THE 18TH CENTURY

In the 18th century, ships often sailed the Atlantic Ocean in a triangular pattern to trade with other countries across the Atlantic Ocean. Manufactured goods from Europe were traded for slaves in Africa, who were then sailed to the thirteen colonies, sold, and sent to work on plantations. Ships then sailed from the colonies to Europe with raw materials such as sugar, cotton, and tobacco.

